

WHAT WILL YOU DISCOVER?

Washington University in St. Louis Division of Biology & Biomedical Sciences 2009 Open House

When: Saturday, April 18, 2009

Where: Washington University in St. Louis

Who should attend: All prospective graduate students interested in the biomedical sciences

Register online at
<http://dbbs.wustl.edu/openhouse>

The Biomedical Sciences Open House is free to all prospective graduate students who wish to attend.

Please note, travel expenses and lodging are the responsibility of the open house attendee. Lunch will be provided.

The Division of Biology and Biomedical Sciences at Washington University in St. Louis offers exceptional doctoral training at one of the nation's preeminent biomedical research centers. The Division consists of 12 doctoral training programs.

- Biochemistry
- Biophysics
- Computational Biology
- Developmental Biology
- Evolution, Ecology & Population Biology
- Human & Statistical Genetics
- Immunology
- Molecular Cell Biology
- Molecular Genetics & Genomics
- Molecular Microbiology & Microbial Pathogenesis
- Neurosciences
- Plant Biology

Washington
University in St. Louis
BIOLOGY & BIOMEDICAL
SCIENCES

Attendees can expect to:

- Interact with faculty and current graduate students from one of the largest and most vibrant research communities in the country.
- Learn more about graduate programs/research areas of interest, our funding record, admissions and student life.
- Meet representatives from our 12 Ph.D. training programs.
- Enjoy lunch and a campus tour.
- Explore the beautiful, culturally diverse city of St. Louis

FOR MORE INFORMATION, PLEASE VISIT: DBBS.WUSTL.EDU/OPENHOUSE